E– Safety Update Summer 22

Talk about the internet with your child

The summer holidays can create a nice opportunity to take the time to sit down and talk to your child about the internet. www.saferinternet.org.uk recommends asking questions such as:

- What sites do you like to visit? What do you like doing online?
- How do you stay safe online? What have you learnt at school about being safe online?
- Where would you go for help if something goes wrong online?

Having an awareness of your child's online activities is vital in keeping them safe, and having a regular conversation also keeps you both up-to-date in a ever changing online world.

Age Specific Advice

This guide is particularly useful in an ever changing world of online apps and sites. It's particularly useful for those parents and carers of particularly young children starting to use the internet. One tip is to use Google's child friendly search engine Swiggle.

Further advice can be found here: https://www.internetmatters.org/advice/

Child-friendly apps

For a list of age-appropriate apps to keep your children busy and engaged this summer, head over to https://www.internetmatters.org/hub/guidance/child-friendly-apps-your-children-will-enjoy/

NSPCC

The NSPCC also has an abundance of information that can support parents with online safety, ranging from holding discussions about online safety with your children, to guides on parental controls and settings. Head here for more https://www.nspcc.org.uk/keeping-children-safe/online-safety/
